SUBJECT: Program Call, FY 1973 - FY 1977

1. Forwarded herewith is the Agency's Program Call for FY 1973- FY 1977. It elicits from you a Program Submission which reflects a consideration of your objectives and presents your program and resource requirements for attaining them.

2. The Planning Assumptions for FY 1973 - FY 1977 describe the wide variety of vital and complex intelligence requirements facing CIA during the planning period and the factors which are expected to make the Agency's missions more difficult to accomplish than in the past. It will clearly be a period where we must rigorously assess objectives and priorities and pursue only those programs which enable the Agency to meet its obligations in the most effective fashion. Use of the Planning Assumptions as the basic reference in planning will sharpen the focus of directorate and component program formulation and enable the preparation of a total Agency plan presenting an integrated approach to objectives and to the factors which will influence future programs.

3. It is not necessary to describe the very strict budgetary situation which is likely to exist during the planning period. We must not, however, allow anticipated shortages of funds and manpower to discourage presentation of new and improved approaches to important intelligence objectives. The Agency must continue to search for new ideas and to encourage innovation, just as it must continue to evaluate the need for and productivity of programs already underway. Of course our planning must take into account the possibility that some activity may have to be reduced or eliminated to support new and expanding programs which are proposed. Nevertheless in planning I do not preclude the option of additional resources being sought by the Agency to meet new work.

4. Unlike last year, this Call requests, with some exceptions, that you describe the essential features of all on-going and proposed programs. This is necessary to enable a comprehensive updating and review of all current activities and objectives, new objectives and program plans and planned adjustments in the allocation of funds and personnel.

5. Your Program Submission will be analyzed and integrated with the plans of other Directorates by the Office of Planning, Programming, and Budgeting. Discussions with O/PPB during the preparation of your responses will greatly enhance the value of our final presentation to the Director.
